Cumberland Poultry to Showcase
EDGE™ Controller at 2017 IPPE
Advanced Platform Manages Vital Poultry Production Operations

ASSUMPTION, Illinois – Cumberland, GSI's poultry division, will feature its advanced EDGE™ control system for managing all of the operational functions of poultry production facilities at the 2017 International Production & Processing Expo Jan. 31-Feb. 2 in Atlanta, Georgia.

EDGE is a single, versatile platform that handles the environmental control applications for breeder, broiler, pullet, layer, turkey and virtually any other poultry house. Producers have the ability to adjust ventilation and temperature, manage lights and bird scales, and control multiple houses or farms, all from a single controller, saving time while increasing efficiency and productivity.

System features include a main controller with a 15-inch color touchscreen that makes navigation and site-wide monitoring quick and easy; online remote access, enabling producers to manage and administer multiple sites and houses from the comfort of their truck, office, home or other off-site locations; and three levels of protection, including triple redundancy and built-in backup mode.

Two different types of expansion boxes can hold either three or six plug-in modules. Additional expansion boxes can be installed as the operation grows. More than a product, EDGE is the next generation of controllers, a platform designed to evolve and expand with producers and their operations for years to come.

EDGE also generates site-specific dashboards and reports to promote increased efficiency and productivity.
