Shoe Inn Automatic Shoe Cover Remover Has Arrived

Shoe Inn automatic shoe cover dispensers have increased efficiency and productivity, helped prevent contamination, and reduced worker's comp injuries for years. Now with the new Automatic Shoe Cover Remover (ASCR), Shoe Inn provides its customers a complete system.

"While most people focus on the difficulty with putting shoe covers on, Shoe Inn has long realized that taking them off is problematic as well. We listened to our customers and have now solved the other half of the equation," says Jeff Foster, Global Product Manager.

When designing the ASCR, Shoe Inn considered several things such as physical space, ability to remove all shoe cover types, and capacity. Ultimately they came up with two models: the ASCR10 and ASCR33. Both models are highly efficient and effective in removing the gamut of standard disposable shoe covers that are available.

The ASCR10 is for low to medium-volume usage. This 10-gallon capacity model combines the canister and motor in one unit. It holds 100 or more disposable shoe covers, depending on the type of shoe cover used, and can be used with a HEPA filtration bag.

The ASCR33 is for medium to high-volume usage with a 33-gallon capacity. It offers HEPA filtration and the canister and motor unit are separate. The canister holds 600 or more disposable shoe covers, depending on the type of shoe cover used.

"Even companies that don't use our dispensers should consider using one of our removers to make taking used shoe covers off faster, easier, safer and cleaner," Foster said.
